This new upmarket Chinese, named after a mountain in Taiwan, is cannily located opposite the new Wembley Stadium. Cooking leans towards fusion flavours, though Cantonese classics are not forgotten. Steamed diver scallop with vermicelli comes in a moreish garlic and soy sauce, while mains have an adventurous streak: resoundingly good venison in black pepper and garlic, plump king prawns in ginger and chilli, or gorgeously subtle baked silver cod in champagne sauce. Only the beautifully presented daytime dim sum can be a little bland.
